Sabrina Quintanar

COURT REPORTING

“Success consists of going from failure to failure without loss of enthusiasm.”

– Winston Churchill

Sabrina Quintanar was born in New Albany, Indiana and moved to Texas when she was a young child. She has lived all over the state, but in 1992, she settled in San Antonio with her mother. She graduated high school in 1995, where she met her husband, David. They have been married for 31 years and have one son, Jesse.

Sabrina originally started college in 1995 right after high school; however, she had to withdraw from all her classes because her son was born in the middle of the semester and she was unable to continue. At that time, Sabrina became a stay-at-home mom for about a year, then she went back to school at the National Institute of Technology in 2000. After graduating there, she began her career working at the Bexar County Courthouse. A couple of promotions later, Sabrina is still with Bexar County and has been for 22 years.

About four years ago, she took the leap of a lifetime and decided to return to San Antonio College for her associate degree in court reporting. Attending school and being a full-time employee has had its turmoil and quite often, time constraints. It has been a roller coaster of a ride, but thankfully, it is one ride that has been worth it and has been rewarding.
